Refer to Fig. 2, information about Incheon International airport in South Korea.

Incheon International Airport, in Seoul, South Korea was voted 'Best Airport Worldwide' for the fourth time in 2009. It has also won the IATA Golden Eagle Award for quality service and value for money and the Green Excellence Award.

As one of the busiest airports in the world, this hub serves 28.5 million passengers and over 70 different airlines each year.

Incheon International Airport strives to be the best by:

- seeking renewable energy sources;
- using the latest advances in IT and biotechnology for check-in, immigration and boarding services;
- providing excellent customer service average arrival processing time is only 13 minutes compared with a world average of 45 minutes; average departure processing time of just 18 minutes, compared to the world average of 60 minutes;
- building the 'Integrated Air City' which includes a world class business and leisure hub including:
 - outstanding services for transit passengers
 - business lounges
 - free Internet access
 - spa facilities
 - a golf town
 - onsite casino
 - The Korean Culture Museum
 - a design gallery exhibiting local arts and craft;
- excellent transfer links bus ticketing services, KTX Airport Express and Airport Railroad Express, frequent and inexpensive taxi services as well as adequate long term car parking facilities.

In December 2009, Incheon International Airport received the Airbus A380, the world's largest commercial plane, for the first time. The airport has prepared three gateways to accommodate the Airbus, which requires extra wide runways for its increased wingspan and two-tiered loading facilities for loading passengers. Emirates will operate the Airbus A380 on seven flights a week on the Incheon-Dubai route.

Refer to Fig. 3, an advertisement for a tourist guiding service in Nepal.

Himalayan Rambles is a privately owned guiding service operating in Nepal. It provides guides for small group treks and tours throughout Nepal, specialising in low level walks rather than the more challenging trekking in the high mountains.

Reasons for choosing these guiding services:

- 1. Personalised service
- 2. Assured safety
- 3. Environmental and cultural awareness
- 4. Fair pricing
- 5. Good food and comfortable accommodation

The guides working for Himalayan Rambles are all experienced. Many started as porters on expeditions in the high mountains. The organisation has now gained professional, government-licensed status for all of its guides.

Refer to Fig. 4, information about the services of various government organisations, supporting the interests of nationals whilst travelling abroad.

Most countries rely upon the services of government organisations to support the interests of nationals whilst travelling abroad.

In the UK, this role falls to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, in South Africa to the Department for International Relations and Cooperation and in the USA, to the U.S. Department of State.

Each of these government organisations is responsible for the provision of consular services. This includes the provision of information and advice to those wishing to travel or to live abroad, ranging from the 'know before you go' campaign, to passport and visa information. They must also respond in times of personal difficulty or distress as well as providing assistance in major emergency situations such as terrorism attacks or natural disasters.

Each organisation provides website information, allowing travellers to check for regular updates of travel advice. Many of these websites have links to social networking sites as well as offering the service of registering your travel plans before departure.
