Section A: Research Methods

Interviews are a popular method used in sociological research. They are used mainly to investigate attitudes and opinions rather than frequency, amounts or trends. Qualitative data is likely to be produced.

Different types of interviews can be used, depending on the aims of the investigation. These may be structured, semi-structured, unstructured or group interviews. Interviews involve face-to-face interaction and are thought to produce more valid data than questionnaires. Interviews usually involve small samples and so it may be difficult to make generalisations from the research findings. A successful interview relies upon the skills and objectivity of the interviewer.

(a) What is meant by the following terms? (i) generalisations [2] (ii) objectivity [2] (iii) semi-structured interview [2] (b) Describe two reasons why the data collected using questionnaires may lack validity. [4] (c) Describe one advantage and one disadvantage of using a random sampling method. [4] (d) Describe one strength and one limitation of longitudinal studies. [4] (e) Describe two ways in which an interviewer may affect the results of an interview. [4] (f) Describe two strengths and two limitations of using qualitative data in sociological research. [8]

Section B: Culture and Socialisation

- 2 Sociologists believe that individuals get their identities through socialisation. We learn how we are expected to behave and are socially controlled to make sure that we conform.
 - (a) What is meant by the term socialisation? [2]
 - (b) Describe two ways through which individuals are socialised into their gender identities. [4]
 - (c) Explain how formal social control leads to conformity in society. [6]
 - (d) To what extent are the experiences of young people influenced by social class? [8]
- 3 Each society has its own cultural differences. What is considered as 'normal' in one society is thus very different to what is seen to be 'normal' in another society.
 - (a) What is meant by the term cultural differences? [2]
 - (b) Describe two differences between childhood and adulthood. [4]
 - (c) Explain how the behaviour of young people is socially controlled. [6]
 - (d) To what extent is gendered role behaviour dependent on the culture in which an individual lives?
