We had decided to think about our holidays earlier than usual this year because we did not want to find that all the hotels were already full. One evening, we sat down together to discuss our plans.

"What would you like to do this time?" asked Father. "Perhaps we could go back to the Alps?" However, my sister Josie and I wanted to go to the seaside, but Mother didn't agree.

"We ought to choose a place where we can do interesting activities," she suggested. "There are all sorts of possibilities. I love visiting the beautiful castles and splendid museums that we have everywhere in France."

"Before making our decision, we must consult some brochures and talk to someone at the travel agent's," my father replied. "I have a friend who works there. I will go to town tomorrow to see him."

Father came home the following evening carrying a pile of brochures with lots of information. After a long discussion, we booked rooms for two weeks in Biarritz. Let's hope that everyone will be happy!
